from the REFRIGERATOR DOOR

A biography of Christopher Best,'90 math education grad and math teacher at Vallivue High School in Caldwell, Idaho, was published in Who's Who Among America's Teachers 2003-2004.

Will Gray, a graduate assistant, received a Fathman Award and a monetary prize for his paper "From Jack Donne to George Herbert: Eliot and 'The End of the Journey'" presented at the 25th annual conference of the T. S. Eliot Society. Fathman awards are given to recognize scholars in the early stages of their careers who are studying Eliot and whose work, in the judgment of the Society, shows extraordinary promise.

Sarah Merkle of the speech faculty has received Certified Professional Parliamentarian status from the American Institute of Parliamentarians. She was also elected as secretary to the Board of Directors of the American Institute of Parliamentarians.

Doris Fisher Harris of the speech faculty is being honored for her 51 years of service with the creation of an annual playwriting competition. The Doris Fisher Harris Playwriting Competition offers cash prizes for the best one-act and 10-minute plays, and the winner will be announced at the annual Bible Conference. The contest is open to alumni and friends of the University. For more information, go to bju.edu/resources/playwriting.

Navy LTJG John Kristopher Caldwell, '99 grad in missionary aviation, was presented with the Wings of Gold, marking the completion of flight training with Training Air Wing One in Mississippi. Caldwell has been assigned to fly the F-18 Hornet.

Samuel Bledsoe, MD '98 grad, was accepted in a general surgery residency at Carraway Methodist Medical Center in Birmingham, AL.

Michael Slattery of the art faculty won first place and Jay Bopp of the art faculty won third place in the recent South Carolina Festival of Flowers regional art competition.

Jamie Turner of the creative writing faculty recently released a new novel, No Dark Valley, available at the BJU Campus Store or through Bethany House.

Dr. Ray St. John, chairman of the division of English language and literature, was elected vice president of the South Carolina Association of Departments of English (SCADE). Its members are the English department chairs of colleges and universities in South Carolina. SCADE's vice president becomes president the following year.

Natalie Parker, Bob Jones Academy senior, won 2nd Place at the International Clarinet Association's annual Clarinet Fest at the University of Maryland.

Rebekah Reach, freshman biology major, received the Gloria A. Haskins Scholarship for $1,000 for her outstanding academic commitment and good citizenship from Representative Gloria Haskins of the SC House of Representatives.

James E. Ransome, painter, illustrator, and muralist, visited campus in September in conjunction with the traveling exhibition of his art. The show was displayed in the exhibition hall of the Sargent Art building in the Gustafson Fine Arts Center at BJU. While here, Ransome also gave a lecture and demonstrated his painting technique to faculty, students, and visitors. Ransome has illustrated more than 30 children's books and has won numerous awards for his work. He lives with his wife and children in Rhinebeck, New York.

College Up Close Trips

Each year, hundreds of teens from all over the country visit Bob Jones University via its beautiful motor coach. The bus travels to major regions and transports prospective students for a two-day visit to "check out" the University. Commercial airline flights from more distant areas are also scheduled. This is an excellent opportunity for students to visit classes, tour the campus, and meet new friends. Check out our website at www.bju.edu/events/cuc or call 1-800-BJ-AND-ME for more information.

Ruben Castilla,'95 criminal justice grad, was promoted to sergeant in charge of the Prince William County Police Department's Eastern District Bicycle Squad in Prince William, VA.

Rebekah Stewart, '94 grad, was named the 2004 Family & Consumer Science Business Professional of the Year from the SC Association of Family & Consumer Science.

Brenda Kuhfuss ,'75 grad and special education teacher at Duncan Chapel Elementary School, was named the Greenville County Teacher of the Year.

About the Cover

BJU invites family and friends to gather on front campus each year for the BJU holiday lighting ceremony. It climaxes as the soloist sings "O Holy Night" and thousands of Christmas lights flood the fountain area.

The front cover illustration was created by Justin Gerard, '03 studio art grad and illustrator for Portland Studios located in Greenville, SC.

The COLLEGIAN

The Collegian is BJU's award-winning student newspaper published 15 times a year, September through June. The following excerpt is from the September 16, 2004, issue.

BJU Applying for National Accreditation Through TRACS

BJU has begun the process of becoming an accredited member of the Transnational Association of Christian Colleges and Schools (TRACS) and hopes to complete the process by April 2005, said Dr. Phil Smith, BJU provost.

TRACS, an accrediting agency begun 25 years ago, is recognized by both the U.S. Department of Education and the Council for Higher Education Accreditation as a national accrediting body for Christian schools, colleges, universities and seminaries, Dr. Smith said. It is also a member of the International Network for Quality Assurance Agencies in Higher Education.

TRACS has approximately 60 members, including Liberty University and Tennessee Temple University. Northland Baptist Bible College is a candidate for membership.

"Accreditation will have immediate benefits for our students," said Dr. Gary Weier, BJU registrar. "It will benefit them more in the public sector, where accreditation is an issue, (by helping students) get certain kinds of licenses that are under government authority: teaching, healthcare and social service licenses."

Dr. Bob III and Dr. Smith met with representatives of TRACS in May 2004 and were satisfied that the standards of BJU students would not be compromised by membership in the organization. The concept of membership application was presented to the BJU board of trustees on May 7, 2004, and the board unanimously approved it.

After BJU submitted the application, TRACS officials visited on July 12-13 to examine the facilities and gave BJU approval to begin its self-study. A self-study is necessary to document organizational structure, educational programs, faculty credentials and student development. BJU's self-study is in progress and must be submitted to TRACS by Dec. 1.

TRACS will evaluate the self-study Jan. 17 and at its national meeting April 6 will vote on whether to grant BJU candidate status. As a candidate, BJU will be listed in the Directory of Higher Education and the Accredited Institutions of Postsecondary Education Directory.

"I think it is a positive move for both incoming students and outgoing students," said Rebecca Phillips, a senior political science major.

The BJU administration began investigating this type of accreditation because of societal pressures and changes that had the potential to create difficulties for some students who might need a degree from an accredited institution.

"Society is more complex today, and there are more pressures from Christians and the public to know whether this institution has acceptance and recognition as accredited," Dr. Smith said.

This step toward accreditation does not contradict BJU's past stance on the issue, Dr. Smith said. BJU has always refused to compromise the process or the product of its education in order to receive the approval of others. Dr. Smith said it would continue to do so.

"We wouldn't become a member of any organization if we had to change the process that produces the product," Dr. Smith said.

Dr. Bob Jones Sr. said, "The proof is in the product." Dr. Bob III affirmed this statement in his statement in the BJU handbook when he wrote that graduates of BJU "are much in demand all over the world because of what they can produce. What they can produce is largely the result of their disciplined lives."

"I think it is good for the university to become accredited," said Andrew Lehn, a senior premed major. "But I came to BJU knowing that it was not an accredited school, and I felt that it was strong enough academically to equip me to succeed in medical school."

To subscribe, please send $12 for first class mail and foreign (1–2 weeks delivery) or $6 for bulk mail (2–4 weeks) to The Collegian, Bob Jones University, Greenville, SC 29614. All subscriptions run September through May.

IN THE style of norma

We're all familiar with the great artists of the past, but what about the artists of today? BJU has been producing great artists for decades, and while not all of their skill is the result of their training at BJU, we'd like to think we had some hand in it.

Art students at BJU get a solid foundation in the fine arts (painting & drawing) as well as in computer programs and typography, depending on their particular specialty (art education, graphic design, & studio art). These are just a few of our art graduates who specialize in illustration (artwork that helps to clarify or tells a story).

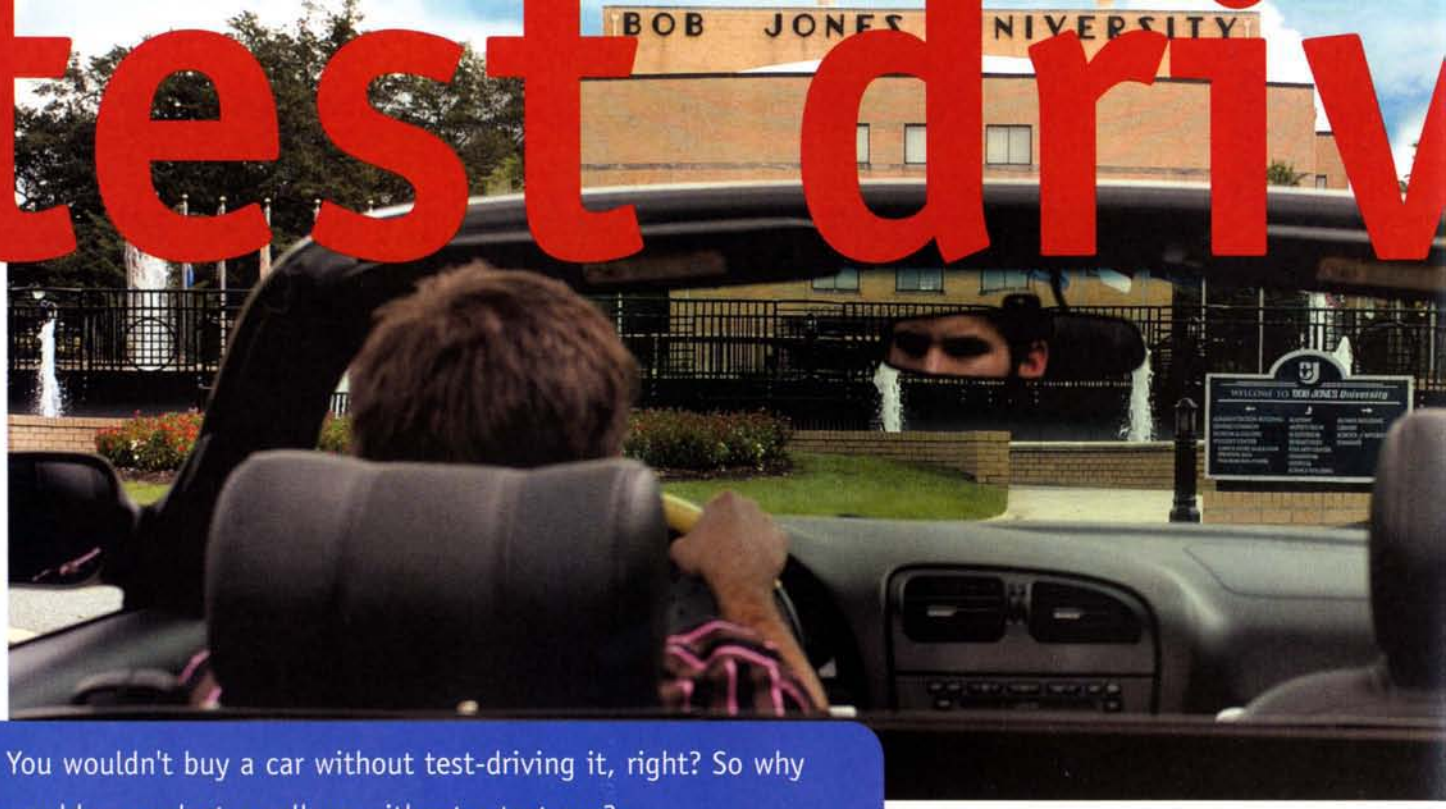
test driv



You wouldn't buy a car without test-driving it, right? So why would you select a college without a test run?

Most college students say a campus visit was the most important factor in helping them decide which college to attend. Knowing what the campus is like, meeting students and faculty, and attending classes and other campus activities can give you a real feel for a college.

On any given day, you'll see visitors on campus checking out what BJU has to offer. Many find that a visit opens their eyes to opportunities at BJU and corrects misconceptions they may have had.

Here's one story of how a campus visit more than 10 years ago resulted in two friends graduating from BJU.

See it to believe it

In 1992, RuthAmy Sutter's dad, a pastor in New Jersey, visited the campus for the first time—along with five other pastors who had never seen BJU before.

Pastor Sutter had grown up hearing strange stories about BJU, but his visit to the campus showed him that those myths were untrue. He found friendly students who were enjoying their studies. And Dr. Bob III's sincere desire to be helpful to the pastors in their ministries back home impressed him.

Summer of 1992—Arriving on campus after a 13-hour drive, the Horaks and Sutters zipped into the first parking place they found. Discovering it was a reserved space for Dr. Bob Jr., they quickly moved the car but not without snapping a photo of their two girls sitting in the space. Steffanie (l.) and RuthAmy (r.) in '92 and Steffanie & RuthAmy in 2004.

When he returned home, he encouraged his wife to visit BJU to see the campus for herself. He especially wanted her to see how BJU could help them as they home schooled their six children.

In June, Mrs. Sue Sutter, along with her 9-year-old daughter RuthAmy, and a friend, Mrs. Roseann Horak and her 10-year-old daughter Stephanie, drove to Greenville to attend the HELP Family Camp and Conference.

RuthAmy and Steffanie had a great time at the HELP camp as their mothers attended educational workshops. The girls stayed in the residence halls, ate in the dining common, and made lots of friends. Their mothers watched a graduation scene in the multi-image presentation about BJU and prayed that their children would one day graduate from Bob Jones University.

Over the next years, the Sutter family attended HELP Conference annually. RuthAmy attended camps, the National Youth Leadership Conference, the High School Fine Arts Festival, and graduated from the Academy of Home Education.

The Horak family also returned to BJU many times over the years. Steffanie came for the High School Fine Arts Festival, the National Youth Leadership Conference, and the Academy of Home Education graduation ceremony.

In 2003 Steffanie graduated from BJU with a B.S. in elementary education. RuthAmy graduated a year later with a B.S. in music education. Both are currently graduate assistants pursuing master's degrees.

You never know what a simple visit to the BJU campus will lead to! ■ Opportunity Days—Two special weekends in November and March give you a glimpse of college life. Visit classes, go to soccer games or the championship basketball game, and talk to students and faculty.

College Up Close—Scattered throughout the school year are special opportunities for high school students and their parents from around the country to visit the campus. Last year 13 trips brought more than 400 students and 50 parents.

High School Festival—High school students participate in music and speech contests and a preaching conference held on campus in late October/early November. Although students are busy competing, they also have the chance to interact with college students in the residence halls, in classes, and around the campus.

Youth Group/School Visits—Youth groups and Christian schools plan trips to BJU when it fits their schedules. Just let us know in advance, and we can arrange for residence hall accommodations and special tours.

Individual Parent/Student Visits—Maybe you and your parents would like to plan a visit that coincides with a family vacation, or maybe you're just in the area. We can tailor your visit to match your needs.

Summer Camps—Each summer 1,200 kids attend over 20 different camps, and many of these summer campers eventually enroll as students at BJU.

Suggestions for making your visit count:

1. Talk to as many people as possible.
2. Stay in the residence halls overnight.
3. Sit in on classes.
4. Have lunch in the dining common.
5. Take a campus tour.
6. Go to chapel.
7. Write down your impressions so you can think about them later.

What if you can't visit in person?

1. Go to the website, www.bju.edu.
2. Talk to an admissions counselor. Call 1-800-BJ-AND-ME.
3. Ask your admissions counselor for the name and e-mail address of a professor in the area of study that interests you. Then write that professor with any questions you may have.

the PRESIDENT'S CORNER

God the Creator designed for man, the creature, not only utilitarian and necessary things of life—food to sustain us, wood to shelter and warm us, fibers to clothe us; He has given us beauty as well.

Functionality alone cannot satisfy the soul of man. He made us aesthetic creatures too, and He gave us so much to satisfy and complete that requirement in us. For example, a sunset, which is without utilitarian value, nourishes our souls. So does a mother's love, a friendship, beautiful poetry, and music.

Why is it, therefore, that we value a baby's smile, a spouse's embrace, or a deed of kindness and compassion less than the material pursuits of life, the quest for the utilitarian? We prize education for the skills and knowledge it brings that enable us to pursue those bigger houses, bigger cars, and bigger toys that we have come to equate with bigger lives and bigger worth.

For most people, college degrees are important only because it is presumed that they will lead to greater income production. But we are not one-dimensional people. The value of life isn't primarily in the tangible and the utilitarian. For those who drink life's utilitarian cup only, the taste is bitter and the thirst is unquenched.

Besides the learning of the things necessary to making a living, the Bob Jones University experience magnifies those elements necessary to make a life beautiful, such as the ennobling virtue of high culture, the character-building virtue of hard and honorable work and of decent and unselfish living, and the virtues of integrity and sacrifice—all related to the beauty of holiness through which Christ shines to the world through our lives.

Psalm 96:6 tells us that "honour and majesty are before him: strength and beauty are in his sanctuary." Our glorious God is infinitely strong and infinitely beautiful, and strength and beauty surround us. How wonderful Heaven will be! We will extol eternally the beauty of God's Lamb while we benefit from it.

But in this world with the blight of sin upon it, kindness, compassion, thoughtfulness, and gentleness beautify us. These attributes of a Christlike life, along with others too numerous to name, are adornments that we prize and desire for our students. The atmosphere and emphasis of Bob Jones University promotes the making of such a life. Here we value and cultivate the features of life that cannot be measured in dollars and cents or by mere functionality. —Bob Jones III

Foundational Truths of Christianity in Art
Open November 30, 2004, through October 30, 2005

During His earthly ministry Christ frequently relied on simple, imaginative comparisons to clarify profound theological truths, and the Gospels are a marvelous record of how these metaphors, symbols, and parables opened the minds and hearts of men and women. It is not surprising, therefore, that the great religious masterworks are also replete with visual metaphors and symbols, many of which are drawn directly from the Old and New Testaments. This exhibition will showcase a blend of paintings, sculpture, and artifacts in which the subject, the symbolism, or the historical context highlights the pillars of the Christian faith.

Open: Tuesday through Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.
Tours: Available by appointment only
Admission: $5 for adults, $4 for seniors (60+), $3 for students, children must be six to be admitted.
Events: Offered monthly

simplifying Scary COLLEGE FINANCES

If you thought deciding on a college and picking a major were tough, you've forgotten another important part of college life: finances. Saving for college, budgeting during college, and preparing financially for life after college are all challenges you'll soon be facing, if you haven't already—but it doesn't need to be scary.

We've gathered some advice from financial administrators and graduates. It's information that can make the task of dealing with finances a lot less academic.

SAVING for college

Rule No. 1: It's never too early to start.

Because college costs are rising faster than inflation, it's smart to start saving for college early. First, find out how much your parents can help you. Second, start saving for college expenses as soon as you begin your first job. Open a savings account and regularly deposit a percentage of your paycheck.

Rule No. 2: Search for loans and scholarships.

Start as early as your junior year of high school to research loans and scholarships. Check the BJU website for eight loan funds and 19 scholarship programs.

"More than 2,200 students work in our student work program annually, earning $4.5 million last year. In addition, we loaned students approximately $4 million and offered $3.4 million in educational assistance last year."—Mr. Chris Baker, director of the BJU financial aid office

Rule No. 3: Don't let a lack of finances keep you from pursuing what you believe God has called you to do.
What God orders, He'll pay for. Financing your education may be one way God teaches you to trust Him, but that doesn't mean you should overextend yourself.

"Remember that whatever you spend on a credit card, you will eventually have to pay back! This sounds obvious, but some people don't understand this aspect of debt. Once you get heavily in debt with a credit card, it's very difficult to get out."
—Jonathan Taylor, 2002 grad, portfolio manager & investment officer at South Financial Asset Management, Inc., Greenville, SC

BUDGETING during college

Rule No. 1: Find a job.
Most students need to work to help pay for college. Working even as few as 10 hours a week can be substantially helpful in making tuition payments. And many campus jobs have a direct correlation with your major.

Rule No. 2: Make a budget.
Don't forget that room, board, and tuition are only part of your college expenses. Budget for textbooks, toiletries, incidental expenses, travel to and from home, and cell phone bills as well.

Rule No. 3: Establish good credit.
College is a great time to begin to establish good credit. Whether you have a credit card in your own name or a parent's card, use credit responsibly.

Plan to pay your credit card bill in full every month. The last thing you want when you graduate from college is a big credit card balance.

Rule No. 4: Begin saving for after-college expenses.
One day you're a freshman and the next you're graduating, planning a wedding, and moving into your first apartment. Have a plan if you're anticipating a significant expense immediately after graduation, whether it's a wedding and a honeymoon or graduate school. You know the old adage, "most people don't plan to fail, they just fail to plan."

MANAGING finances after college

Rule No. 1: Manage your debt.
Many graduates leave college owing money on their school bills. Lenders will establish a repayment schedule for you, so make sure you repay those school loans as quickly as you can.

"A portion of my paycheck is directly deposited into an additional savings account that I recently opened. That's money I don't even touch."
—Will Meadows, 2004 grad, saving for his wedding in May 2005

Rule No. 2: Resist the urge to buy too much too quickly.
That first apartment, new clothes for your first job, furniture, a new car—recent grads face lots of temptations. Buying things is easy; paying for them isn't.

"Budgeting is actually very freeing, because you know what you can spend and you can feel good about a purchase rather than guilty."
—Laurilyn Davis Hall, 2004 graduate and recently married

Rule No. 3: Establish credit if you haven't already done so.
Look for the best credit card rate, not the first one that shows up in your mailbox. Be discerning before you accept an offer.

Rule No. 4: Fine tune your budgeting skills.
Establish a plan for both spending and saving and decide on the categories that will make your budget work for you. Don't forget to plan for an emergency cash fund for three months of living expenses. ■

Sometimes it can be hard to see what your teacher is REALLY like, so here is the fifth in a series of faculty spotlights, giving you a sneak peek behind the scenes at just a few of our many faculty. Yep - faculty are real people too!

FACUL

Ken Casillas

Bible & Seminary faculty

3 years teaching at BJU

Classes include OT Messages, Biblical Themes, Bible Doctrines, The Pentateuch, OT Theology

"'Training preachers is what we love most and do best' is more than a slogan. I'm here because I'm burdened for the next generation of preachers. I love our ministerial students, and it thrills me to see them being shaped into men of God who can handle the Scriptures accurately."

Field of Study

Most special thing about the Bible: Its revelation of the Gospel as the centerpiece of God's work and as the motivating power for the Christian life.
How are you involved at church? Elder board and missions committee, adult Sunday school teacher, Hispanic outreach director, and ministerial internship program assistant

Degrees

B.A. Bible '91, M.A. Bible '93, and Ph.D. OT Interpretation '01, BJU

Family Background

Originally from Puerto Rico
Wife: Soraya; Children: Daniel (8), Joshua (6), Anna Grace (5), and twins Abigail and Samuel (2)

Personal stuff

Favorite color: Blue
Favorite book of the Bible: Ephesians
Favorite season: Summer, because my family and I take students on mission trips to Latin America.
Describe yourself in a word: Eclectic
What do you do when you're bored: I have 5 kids. I'm never bored.

Betty Solomon

Professional Writing & Publication faculty

26 years teaching at BJU

Classes include Principles of Journalism, News Writing, Reporting, Article Editing

"At BJU I can be a part of training Christian journalists to influence the direction of the media."

Field of Study

Why writing? You're always researching something new and different. It's a great way to keep current with what's going on in your world. You also get to be nosy because everyone expects journalists to ask questions.
How many pieces have you written? Oops. Was I supposed to keep count? I freelance regularly for the local paper, The Greenville News, and for several Christian publications.

Degrees

B.S. English Education '78 and M.Ed. Teaching English,'80, BJU; M.A. Journalism, '93, Univ. of SC

Family Background

Originally from South Boston, VA
Single

Personal stuff

What did you want to be when you grew up? Teacher. I tended to be a know-it-all.
Favorite color: To wear—black. To grade papers with—purple.
Favorite Pizza topping: Mushrooms
Favorite book of the Bible: Philippians

Doug Garland

Residential Construction faculty and chairman of the division of SAS Business, Trades, & Technology

6 years teaching at BJU

Classes include Architectural Drawing, Computer-Aided Drafting, Residential Mechanical Systems

"BJU offers a faculty member great opportunities to impact a wide variety of Christian young people from all over the world. Those students can then go out and impact others for Christ."

Field of Study

First thing you built: Model of a building at Uxamal, a Mayan city
Favorite type of wood: Maple
How long have you been interested in carpentry? I went to observe my father at work when I was 4.

Degrees

B.A. Missions '82 and M.A. Bible, '86, BJU; Licensed SC General Contractor, Mechanical Contractor, and House Inspector

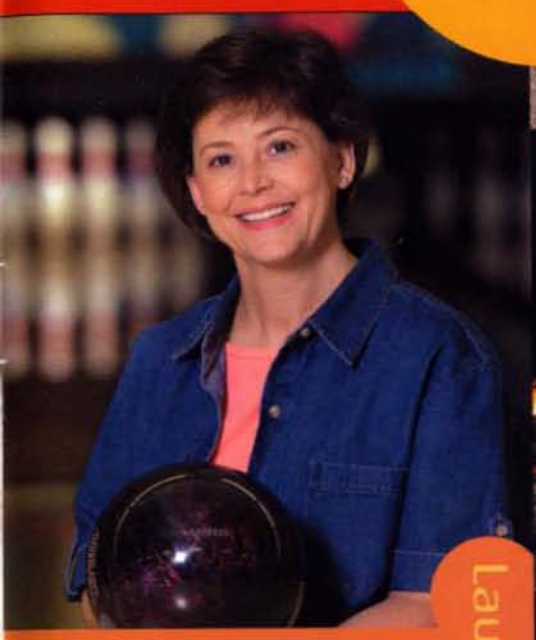
Family Background

Originally from Dale City, VA
Wife: Joyce: Children: Andrew (21), Abby (18), Anthony (16), Auria (10)

Personal stuff

What did you want to be when you grew up? Astronaut
Favorite toys: Erector Sets (the original ones were metal)
Most embarrassing moment: As a work scholarship student in the plumbing department, I hit a smoke detector in the Museum & Gallery. Fire trucks arrived moments later.
Favorite book of the Bible: II Timothy

TY spotLIGHT



Laura Glenn

Administrative Management faculty and chair of the division of Administrative Management & Technology

24 years teaching at BJU

Classes include Home-Based Business, Technology Training Methods, and Introduction to Desktop Publishing

"I love the students and want to make a difference in their lives. I try to be honest and open with them and let them know that I'd rather be a Christian than anything in the world. I love encouraging them to pray for specific things and to look for specific answers."

Field of Study

Favorite management tip: "Excellence is doing a common thing in an uncommon way."—Booker T. Washington
How do you prioritize? "If you have a frog to eat, eat it right away." Obviously, the longer you wait to eat the frog, the worse it gets. So, if something is hanging over your head, get it done early.

Degrees

B.S. Office Administration, '77, BJU; M.Ed. Business, '84 and Ed.D. Business, '91, Arizona State Univ.

Family Background

Originally from Mission, TX
Single

Personal stuff

Describe yourself in a word: Fun
Interesting hobbies: Singing, fishing, bowling, and playing the guitar

Dan Wooster

Computer Science faculty

23 years teaching at BJU

Classes include Computer Science, Microprocessor Architecture, and E-Commerce

"I enjoy teaching at BJU because of the satisfaction of knowing I'm helping the cause of Christ by giving Christian young people an opportunity to become the best they can be in the field of computer science for the glory of God."

Field of Study

What fascinates you about computers? I first got into computers because of the realization that here is a device that is capable of doing almost anything I could ask it to do, without hesitation, and much, much faster than I would ever be able to do it—the perfect playmate.

Degrees

B.S. Computer Science, '80, BJU; M.S. Computer Science, '81, Bowling Green State Univ.

Family Background

Originally from Toledo, OH
Wife: Karen; Children: Sara (19), Jonathan (16), and Joseph (11)

Huh? Think we're talking about b-ball? Well, we are—sort of. You can watch the big b-ball game while enjoying one or more of the sandwiches we listed being offered at the new café in the Davis Field House—The Fast Break. It's the new campus eatery!

They have much more than sandwiches though—cool wraps, paninis, salads, soups, Starbucks coffee, and even some occasional homemade brownies. The Fast Break is an extension of the University Snack Shop, managed by Miss Rebekah Donica and Mr. Jeff Hagans. "The Fast Break is an exciting new venture for us," Jeff says. "It's proving to be very popular with the students."

The Fast Break is open during lunch (M-F), dinner (M-Th), and during games on the weekends. And if the café is too crowded, there are a few comfortable seats elsewhere—just about 3000 or so!

So come to The Fast Break and try a Hook Shot or a Field Goal and meet the Big Man and the Power Forward. Subs and paninis never sounded so good (or athletic)! ■

Major

Organizational Communication

overview

The organizational communication major prepares students to meet the needs of today's communication-driven world. It combines theory and performance to help students develop public speaking skills and interpersonal communication skills as well as an understanding of communication processes. Graduates go on to careers in business and industry as communication specialists—developing corporate communication strategies, solving communication problems, and implementing communication training programs.

current student

Jim Galon, senior from Painesville, OH
"Theories of communication will challenge your mind in ways you never thought possible."

sample classes

• Public Speaking • Communication Training & Development
• Small Group Communication • Theories of Communication

graduates

Suzanne Bakri, '00 grad
Account Executive, Creative Response Concepts in Alexandria, VA

Melissa Dye, '03 grad
Program Assistant, Upstate Area Health Education Center in Greenville, SC

Tarenne Gillaspie Hogsed, '00 grad
Quality Assurance Analyst, Florida Hospital in Orlando, FL

Related majors include Interpretative Speech, Mass Media, Rhetoric & Public Address, and Dramatic Production.

Accounting

overview

The accounting major prepares students to work as accountants or business managers with businesses, corporations, churches, or other Christian organizations. Those wishing to sit for the CPA exam may meet the educational requirements by earning a master of science in accountancy in conjunction with the bachelor's degree or by taking additional undergraduate work. Approximately 50 percent of BJU accounting graduates accept positions with one of the top five U.S. accounting firms.

current student

Su Ge, senior from Nan Jing, China
"What I appreciate most about my major is my accounting professors' genuine willingness to give advice and to help their students."

sample classes

Related majors include Financial Management, Comprehensive Business Management, Global Technologies Management, and International Business.

Focus

BJU offers 126 different majors, so many that you're probably unfamiliar with a good number of them. Each issue of the Review will feature a quick glance at four majors in this Major Focus feature.

Family & Consumer Sciences

overview

The family & consumer sciences major prepares students for the roles of Christian woman, wife, and mother. The godly Christian family is the primary focus of all FCS courses. The FCS major provides instruction in areas such as child development, foods and nutrition, apparel and textiles, home furnishings and interior design, FCS education, and personal and family finance. Graduates are prepared both to serve the Lord in the professional world and to minister to the needs of their families on a daily basis.

current student

Hannah Bullard, senior from Edmond, OK
"Advanced Sewing Techniques was one of my favorite classes because I love intricate details and perfection in sewing. I learned how to give the extra touch and professional detail to any project I do."

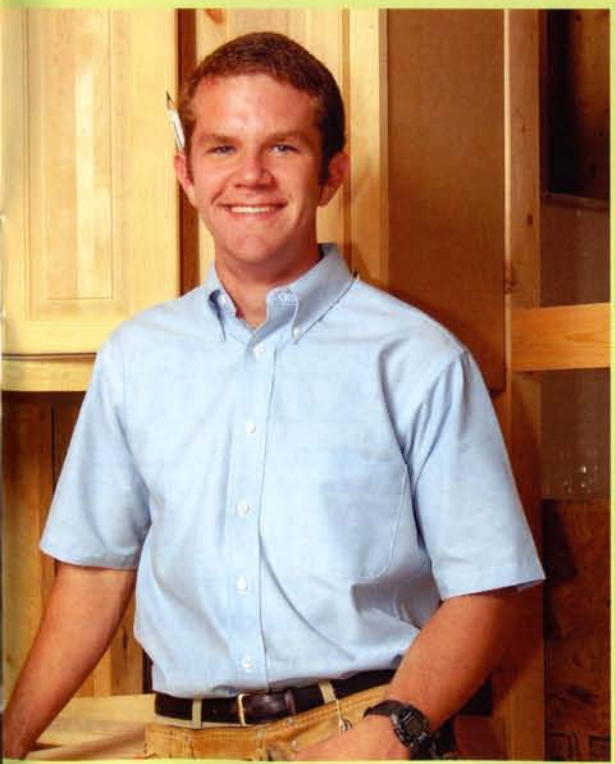
Related majors include Foods & Nutrition, Interior Design, and Apparel, Textiles, & Design.



Residential Construction

overview

The residential construction major, a three-year associate's degree program, prepares students to enter the construction industry as lead carpenters, superintendents, project managers, and estimators. Many use their skills to serve the Lord through camp ministries and missions. The residential construction management major is a four-year bachelor's degree program that adds business and management courses to the three-year degree for those desiring to start a construction business or enter graduate school. Both programs combine classroom instruction with hands-on experience.

current student

Jonathan Poppe, sophomore from Piedmont, SC
"I have already found many uses for the information I've learned so far."
